

I'm Trying OpenOffice.org. How do I learn more?

By adriantry

Created 11/11/2008 - 9:29pm

Submitted by adriantry on Tuesday 11th of November 2008 09:29:03 PM Filed under Just talk [1]

Yesterday we looked at the similarities between OpenOffice.org Writer and the word processor you are already familiar with - whether that is Microsoft Word or something else. It's reassuring to know that some things feel familiar.

But it's also nice to get below the surface and learn something new. You might be a fiddler, and feel your way through the program by trial and error. Or you might like to use some of the many resources available on the Internet.

If you've already had a look around the program, you might also be wondering where all of the clipart, templates and other resources are.

OpenOffice.org has a very strong and supportive community made up of users, developers, organisations and companies. There is a huge amount of support and resources available for OpenOffice.org on the Net. But finding these resources can be quite a challenge. Here is a brief introduction to some of the most important and useful OpenOffice.org projects and support sites.

Rest of article [2]

Just talk

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/32113>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/68>

[2] <http://www.adriantry.com/im-trying-openofficeorg-how-do-i-learn-more/>